ATTACK ON TAFT'S TARIFF BOARD PLAN

Fordney Asserts Project Means Turmoil In Business of Nation.

time, to the eternal damnation of busi of political tricksters, thank fortune. In fact, the majority are business men, elected because of that fact, and owing to their experience, and coming as they do from every nook and corner of the land, they are certainly better quali-fied to work out the tariff and every vital question that five men, selected, perhaps, from five different States could

Who Shall Control?

"If the tariff is not to be intrusted to the men whom the common people select, it will not be long before the common people will have nothing to do with the affairs of the Government, and if the tariff is to be eliminated from the consideration of Congress, why trust Congress with the solution of any important problem? If the common people are not getting all they deserve now, I would truly feel sorry for them when they are removed to a degree further from their interests by taking the all-important tariff question out of the hands of men they elect to attend to their affairs. and elect to attend to their affairs and putting it in the hands of an appointive commission, who would constantly agitate because of agitators.

"I would feel exceedingly unsafe as a protectionist if men were placed on a commission, with power to act, entertaining such ideas as does the gentleman from Indiana.

"The Constitution of the United States provides that all laws for the raising of revenues for the Government must originate in the House of Representatives. No act would be lawful, even if it originated in the Senate.

As to Legislation

As to Legislation.

"Therefore of what use can a tariff ommission be in the enactment of such laws, except to procure information in this or in foreign countries to present to Congress for the consideration of the House of Representatives in preparing a tariff bill; and under existing condithose or laws the Federal Government, through the consular service of the United States, has representatives in every principal district in every nation in the world, obtaining the very information that the tariff commission would be expected to obtain—that is, conditions abroad as to the cost of reader mation that the tariff commission would be expected to obtain—that is, conditions abroad as to the cost of production, the amount of goods going from the United States to the foreign territories, and through the Monthly Consular Reports very valuable information is given, but no agitation comes to Congress under the daisting laws for a change of tariff rates, as would be the case if we had a tariff commission. "Under existing laws we have a tariff board, consisting of three men, appointed by the President, which board has gathered since the adoption of the new tariff law and will in the future gather such information as the President needs for the application of the maximum and minimum rates of duty, as provided for in the Payne tariff bill. What more can be desired? Who wants agitation? No one except the chronic dissatisfied. It is true, however, that one of this class is toom any for the country's good."

"I feel it my duty," continued Fordney "as a Republican and a member of the Committee on Ways and Means of this House, to answer the speech of the gentleman from Indiana, because of his assault, not on the new darifflaw alone, but on the Republican party, for which he lauds himself to the skies, holding himself up before the people as a martyr, representing himself to be the savior of the people, demanding justice from his party, and not getting it, and wishing to make his people believe that in order to be saved they must go to him.

Reason For Vcte.

bim for his vote against the tariff bill were unfounded, frivolous, and in no way justifiable."

The Michigan Representative c mented on the votes cast by Beverldgs various sections of the tariff bili The bill, said Fordney, as enacted was indorsed, by President Taft and the majority of the Republican party.

majority of the Republican party.

"Yet the gentleman from Indiana," he continued, "could not see his way cear as a Republican to vote for a measure adopted by the majority of his party. His position reminds me of a story of a very large man and a very small man who occupied one bed. The small man who occupied one bed. The small man inally decided to kick the big fellow out of the bed, and, in the quiet of the night he cautiously crept up behind the big fellow, placed his back against the wall, and doubling up, placed his feet in the back of the big fellow, and then let fly. The bed went with the big fellow, however, and the little man dropped behind.

Explains Expenses.

Explains Expenses.

The gentleman from Indiana has evidently placed himself where he is not in bed with the big fellow-the Republica party-neither s he on the wall as a souvenir, but sprawled upon the floor and alone and in his recent speech, with all manner of misleading and incorrect statements relative to the tariff, he tries to explain to the people why he is here. To illustrate the necessity of raising funds to pay Government expenses,

"If a fund had been started in the If a fund had been started in the time of the birth of Christ, and $1 had been placed in that fund every minute day and night, from that time to the present date, the fund at this time would not be large enough to pay the running expenses of this Government for the coming year."

It is estimated that $1,040,000,000 will be the need for expenditures next year.
